TO THE HONORABLE CITY COUNCIL OF PARIS.

GENTLEMEN—We the undersigned, citizens of Paris, respectfully request your honorable body to enact and have enforced a Curfew Law, if you deem it wise and just, such as is in effect in various cities throughout the State, in the interest of the morals of the boys and girls of Paris, our future men and women.

Signed,

Cut this out, have each adult member of your family to sign it, and send to The Bourbon News.

Some Curfew Comments.

Below are printed some of the many comments on the Curfew movement in this city:

The Paris Reporter says: "Our wide-awake and enterprising contemporaries, The Bourbon News, is advocating a Curfew law for this city. We desire most heartily to second the motion. Something should be done to keep children of tender years off the street at night. Will the Council act? Will they heed the almost unanimous wish of every mother and father in the city? Improve the morals of the young people if you want to decrease crime."

The Danville Advocate says: "The crusade for the passage of a Curfew law in Paris is assuming large proportions. A petition with hundreds of signatures is being gotten up for presentation to the City Council, urging the necessity of passing a Curfew law there."

The Cynthiana Democrat says: "THE BOURBON NEWS is trying to get the sentiment of the people of Paris on the question of the Council's adopting a Curfew ordinance."

THEATRICAL AND OTHERWISE.

News and Comment of Stage Matters and Other Gossip.

"Just Before Dawn," Lincoln J. Carter's newest successful melodrama, will be the attraction Thursday night at the Grand. This successful author and producer has a number of companies on the road producing his other plays, but none of the pieces are more thrilling or better mounted than "Just Before Dawn." The scene of the play is laid in Pennsylvania, and the thrilling story of life in the mining districts is told by a number of sensational scenes and climaxes. The scenic and mechanical effects are something wonderful. Reserved seats for this engagement are on sale at Borland's.

Manager Borland has booked for the Grand on Tuesday, Dec. 19, the celebrated Stroh Opera Co., presenting the bright and tuneful opera "Nadgy," which was the most pronounced of all the New York Casino successes. The cast contains the names of such celebrated artists as Miss Laura Denio, the prima donna soubrette; Mr. Fred Frear, who is well known throughout the South and is a universal favorite; Mr. Adolph Meyer, the baritone; Mr. Fred Palmer, an actor and singer of recognized ability; Miss May Gooche, the prima donna soprano; Miss Josephine Knight, the prima donna contralto; Mr. Wm. H. Raymond, the tenor. Mr. Leo M. Polachek is the musical director. This will be one of the best attractions that has ever appeared at the Grand, and reflects great credit upon Manager Borland for his efforts to give the public first-class amusements. His efforts should be appreciated by the people of Paris. The way to secure the best of attractions for our opera house is for the people to patronize them. It is very difficult for a manager to secure good attractions when the traveling managers know that those companies which have been here have played to poor houses. Let the report go abroad that Paris is a good show town, and there will be no difficulty in securing the best there is on the road. Timely notices will be given of the advance sale, and we hope to see the house sold out and the "S. R. O." sign out for the first time this season.

The production of the dramatization of Gen. Lew Wallace's famous novel "Ben Hur" in New York last week was witnessed by enormous crowds. The critics all agree that from a scenic standpoint it is the greatest spectacle ever produced on the English stage. It rises above the melodrama and the play is interpreted by an excellent cast. The chariot race was successfully reproduced by two chariots, each drawn by four thoroughbred horses running on treadmills, and was very realistic, even to the breaking of the wheel of Messala's chariot. The race was the most popular feature of the play. It is predicted that the play will run for two years in New York.

Col. Coates Kinney, of Xenia, O., a poet and author of established reputation, who is the father of Miss Clara Allen Kinney, who has many friends in this city, has just issued a new volume of poems entitled "Mists of Fire." The book is from the press of Rand, McNally & Co., Chicago.

Mande Adams, who was voted an automobile in New York for being the most popular actress in America, began an engagement last night at the Grand, in Cincinnati, presenting "The Little Minister."

Olga Nethersole, the famous English actress, will present her new play "Sapho" in Cincinnati next week at the Grand.

INSULAR POLICY.

The Annual Report of Secretary Root Deals With the Question.

High Tribute Paid to the Courage of Our Troops in the Face of Great Hardships—The Situation is Much Improved in Cuba.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Dealing as it does with large questions of insular policy, of army re-organization; of the future of Cuba and of the campaign in the Philippines, the first annual report of Secretary Root, just made public, is of exceptional interest. The report begins with the recital of the policy followed in re-organizing the army in accordance with the necessities arising from the discharge of the state volunteers and of the men enlisted for the Spanish-American war and gives statistics of the past and present strength of the organization, covering in that respect matters dealt with in the reports of the major general commanding and of the adjutant general. It is stated that at present all of the new regiments of volunteers are in the Philippines or on their way there.

The operations in those islands are next taken up and the report again points out that the outbreak of last February was provoked by the insurgents themselves and was, from our standpoint, unavoidable. Frequent reference is made to the report of Gen. Otis to show the magnitude of the task set for him with the inadequate forces at his command when the outbreak came, and a high tribute is paid to the courage of the troops, who, in the face of great hardships, voluntarily consented to forego an immediate return to their homes upon the expiration of their terms of service.

The history of the operations of the past season is recounted and the secretary outlines the plan of the present campaign which began in October. This involved the movement of three separate forces. One was to proceed up the Rio Grande along the northeastern borders of the plains and strike across to the Gulf of Lingayen. Another was to land on the gulf shores by transports and proceed along the coast road to unite with the first force.

A third column was to strike straight along the railroad to Dagupan. The secretary says these movements were executed with energy, rapidity and success, notwithstanding deluges of rain. It is said that wherever the permanent occupation of our troops has extended in the Philippines, civil law has been put in operation, courts have been established and education introduced until at present in Manila there are now better facilities for primary education than ever before.

A chapter tells of what has been done in Cuba by the army during the past year. Order has been maintained, social distress has been alleviated, sanitation has been instituted, and in all respects satisfactory progress has been made, and the part played by our troops now is but the restraining influence of their presence. The revival of industry has been slow, but has also made gratifying progress, and the reconcentration has returned to the cultivation of their lands, though the complete restoration of the sugar industry has been seriously hampered by the lack of capital. As order has been restored, the force has been reduced and orders have recently been given for the withdrawal of eight companies of infantry and eight troops of cavalry. In Porto Rico the year has been devoted to administering and improving the civil government of the island and instructing the people in the rudiments of self government at every step in conference with the leading citizens. This work has been retarded by the unfortunate industrial conditions, owing to lack of markets for the island products and to the distress caused by the great hurricane. Nevertheless much has been done to correct abuses, the courts have been reorganized, the writ of habeas corpus has been restored and arrangements have been made for taking the census.

Booth Tucker in the South. CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Dec. 2.—Commander Booth Tucker, of the Salvation army, passed through this city Friday night en route direct to New Orleans. After which he will go to Mobile, Montgomery, Nashville and Atlanta for the purpose of inaugurating his plan of mission work among the southern Negroes.

Murder in a Dormitory. KANKAKEE, Ill., Dec. 3.—William Wiley, colored, a patient in the Kankakee hospital, was found in bed in the dormitory Friday morning, stabbed to the heart. There was no sign of a struggle. Fifteen other patients sleep in the dormitory. It is believed one of them did the murder.

Another Trust Forming. PITTSBURGH, Pa., Dec. 2.—An attempt is being made to consolidate all of the iron and enamelling manufacturing companies of the manufacturing belt known as the middle west, which reached from the Allegheny mountains to the Mississippi river. It is proposed to effect a consolidation of the leading companies that make enamelled ware, such as bath tubs, wash stands, and general laundry and bath room equipments, and then buy the rest of the smaller concerns. The capital is estimated at $10,000,000.

MARITIME CANAL.

Secretary Hitchcock Makes Public an Advanced Report of the Nicaragua Company—Stock Being Subscribed.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Secretary of the Interior Hitchcock, in his annual report, makes public an advance report of the Maritime Canal Co., of Nicaragua, dated December 4 next, setting forth that since the organization of the company 10,145 shares of the capital stock have been subscribed for at par, amounting in the aggregate to the sum of $1,014,500, of which amount $1,008,830 has been paid into the treasury in cash; that there has been paid into the treasury from other sources $155,770.51, making the total amount of cash received $1,164,600.51. The company has paid for property, work and labor done, and materials furnished in the execution of work of construction of the canal, and in administration expenses the sum of $1,161,772.70 in cash, $1,990 shares of the full paid capital of the company of the par value of $3,100,000; $150,000 of its first mortgage bonds and its obligations for $6,705,000 of the said first mortgage bonds. It has also issued 150,000 shares of its capital stock of the par value of $18,300,000 in payment for concessionary rights, privileges, franchises, etc.

The liabilities of the company consist of amounts still due under the concessions granted to the company, of the $6,705,000 of bonds before mentioned, the said bonds being due to the assignees of the Nicaragua Canal Construction Co. for work and labor done and materials furnished in the execution of the work of constructing the inter-oceanic canal, and of cash liabilities outstanding unpaid to an amount not exceeding $200,000.

The assets of the company consist of its unused capital stock, of the $518,500 first mortgage bonds and the 2,430 shares of capital stock received in liquidation as aforesaid, the concessions, rights, privileges and franchises which it now owns, and of the plant, equipments and other property in Central America.

The congressional assertion of its right to determine the line of canal through Nicaragua and Costa Rica under the concession of the company, according to the company, caused uncertainty as to final location of the route and with other causes, has made the resumption of the work of construction impossible. The company incloses two formal protests, one dated December 2, 1898, and the other September 8, 1899, to Secretary Hay against the agreement by the Nicaraguan government for another canal concession in violation of the rights not only of the company, but of the United States and Costa Rica.

The report estimates the irrigable area of the arid region of the United States at 74,000,000 acres, capable of comfortably supporting, under a proper irrigation system, 50,000,000 people. Reasonable expenditures both by the federal and state governments looking to a well defined irrigation system, are urged.

Nearly 50 proposed new forest reserves or additions to those already established are under consideration. The Daves commission reports the time has not yet arrived for the installation of a territorial or state government in Indian territory, owing mainly to lack of uniform land tenures.

Attention is called to the phenomenal increase in railway traffic in the last two years, amounting approximately to increased earnings in 1898 over 1897 to $9,000,000, and the previous year to $23,000,000, the increase being only limited by the lack of cars to carry products.

CANCELLATION OF STAMPS.

In Addition to Writing Initials, Stamps Should Be Mutilated by Cutting Three Parallel Incisions.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—The commissioner of internal revenue Friday issued a circular amending regulations as to cancellation of documentary and proprietary stamps, providing that:

"In all cases where a documentary stamp of the denomination of ten cents or any larger denomination shall be used for any tax imposed by the act of June 13, 1898, the person using or affixing the same shall, in addition to writing or stamping thereon with ink, the initials of his name and the date when affixed, mutilate said stamp by cutting three parallel incisions lengthwise through the stamp, beginning not more than one-fourth of an inch from one end thereof and extending to within one-fourth of an inch of the other end.

"Where such stamp is cancelled by cutting or perforating in any manner authorized by existing regulations, as aforesaid, the mutilation herein provided will not be required."

This provision shall take effect and be in force on and after December 15.

Cripple Creek Gold Report For November. CRIPPLE CREEK, Col., Dec. 2.—The total gold production of the Cripple Creek district in November was $2,515,500, an increase of more than 25 per cent over the largest previous monthly record.

Business Portion of Town Destroyed. CAPE CHARLES, Va., Dec. 2.—The entire business portion of Olancooke, Accomac county, Va., was destroyed by fire at an early hour Friday morning. The loss is estimated at $100,000, with $25,000 insurance.

AMERICAN NAVY.

Annual Report of Secretary Long a Document of Unusual Interest.

He Recommends Three Armored Cruisers of 13,000 Tons; Twelve Gunboats of 900 Tons, and Three Protected Cruisers of 8,000 Tons.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—The annual report of the secretary of the navy just made public is a document of unusual interest, dealing not only with the work of the navy during the past year, and important recommendations for the future, but also discussing important questions relating to the navy, including the authorization of 18 new war ships, the imperative need of special legislation in the early days of congress for armor of the best quality that can be obtained, and the proposition that the thanks of congress be given to the commander-in-chief of the North Atlantic squadron and to the officers and men under his command for the part they took in the naval operations at Santiago.

These larger items of the report receive extended attention at the hands of Secretary Long. As to the increase of the navy he says:

"The number of large, swift and powerful armored cruisers of great coal endurance in our navy is largely disproportionate to the rest of the naval establishment. The experience of the last year has also shown the need of several smaller vessels, usually classed as gunboats. It is therefore, recommended that congress be required to authorize the construction of the following vessels:

"First—Three armored cruisers of about 13,000 tons trial displacement, of a maximum draft at deep load not to exceed 26 feet, carrying the heaviest armor and most powerful ordnance for vessels of their class, to be so sheathed and to have the highest practicable speed and great radius of action.

"Second—Twelve gunboats of about 900 tons trial displacement, to be sheathed and coppered.

"And third, as recommended a year ago, three protected cruisers of about 8,000 tons trial displacement, carrying the most powerful ordnance for vessels of this class, to be sheathed and coppered and to have the highest practical speed and great radius of action."

The secretary adds in this communication that the 8,000 ton protected cruisers are considered better adapted to the present needs of the navy than the 16,000 ton ships required last year. He also asks that if satisfactory bids can not be obtained for the new ships authority be given to build them at the United States navy yards.

Concerning more war ships, the secretary says:

"The most important question pertaining to naval construction at the present time, and one that demands prompt attention, is that of the armor for vessels now building and for others authorized but not yet contracted for, on account of the provision in the act of March 3, 1899, prohibiting the department from contracting for the vessels therein authorized until contract has been made for the armor therefore within $300 a ton. The price fixed is one for which even inferior armor can not be obtained and the department therefore has been unable to invite proposals for the three battleships and the three armored cruisers authorized by the act of March 3, 1899.

"It is urgently recommended that in the early days of its next session congress enact special legislation, by joint resolution or otherwise, as may be necessary to enable the department to make contracts early in the coming year for 7,358 tons of armor of the best quality that can be obtained in this country for the Maine, Ohio and Missouri, and that the provision of the act of March 3, 1899, limiting the price of armor to $300 per ton, and the restriction preventing the armored vessels therein authorized from being contracted for until the armor therefor is contracted for, be removed.

"Whatever may be the future action of congress regarding the establishment of a government armor factory, it can hardly affect the supply of armor for the Maine, Ohio and Missouri, as it will under any circumstances be impracticable to obtain it from such a source in reasonable time to complete the vessels above referred to."

An Orphan Asylum for Cuban Children. NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—A movement for the raising of funds for a memorial orphan asylum for Cuban children, which shall bear the name of Mrs. Thurston, the first wife of Senator John M. Thurston, and who died shortly after a visit she made to Cuba, was started Sunday night in the Madison Avenue Presbyterian church under the auspices of the Thurston Memorial association.

Mgr. Chappelle in San Francisco. SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 4.—Monsignor Chappelle, archbishop of New Orleans and apostolic delegate to Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines, arrived here Sunday en route to Manila, where he goes to arrange church affairs to conform with the change of government in the Philippines.

The Samoan Treaty Signed. WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—The treaty for the partition of the Samoan islands was signed at the state department at 3:20 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

MODDER RIVER CASUALTIES.

Details of the Killed and Wounded of Gen. Methuen's Forces are Being Given—The Losses Frightful.

LONDON, Dec. 4.—The war office has received the following from Gen. Forster-Walker:

"CAPS TOWN, Friday, Dec. 1.—Gen. Gatacre reports no change in the situation.

"Gen. French has made a reconnaissance from Naauwpoort to Rosmead. The troops returned to-day.

"Gen. Methuen's flesh wound is slight. He is remaining at Modder river for the reconstruction of the bridge. Am reinforcing him with Highlanders and a cavalry corps. Horse artillery, the Canadian regiment, Australian contingents and three battalions of infantry moved up to the De Aar and Belmont line."

As surmised the British dead and wounded at the hard-fought battle of Modder river number hundreds. Up to two o'clock Saturday afternoon only the bare total 438, of which number 73 were killed, had been given out.

The revised list of Modder river casualties, non-commissioned officers and men, is divided as follows: 9th lancers, 1 wounded; engineers, 2 wounded; artillery, 3 killed, 25 wounded; 2d Coldstreams, 10 killed, 56 wounded; 3d grenadiers, 9 killed, 38 wounded, 4 missing; Scots guards, 10 killed, 37 wounded, 1 missing; Northumberland fusiliers, 11 killed, 31 wounded; 1st Northumberland, 8 wounded; 2d Yorkshire, 9 killed, 44 wounded; 1st North Lancashire, 3 killed, 14 wounded; Argyll and Sutherland Highlanders, 15 killed, 95 wounded, 2 missing; 1st Coldstreams, 20 wounded; South African Reserve, 1 wounded; medical corps, 1 wounded.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—The president has designated Adelbert F. Hay to proceed at once to South Africa as the representative of the state department, and take the place of Mr. Macrum, the present United States consul at Pretoria. The state department has yielded to Mr. Macrum's repeated appeals to be relieved and he will not await the arrival of Mr. Hay before quitting his post. Mr. Hay is the son of the secretary of state.

THE BAYOMBONG CAPTURE.

Gen. Conon Surrendered 800 Officers and Men With Rifles, and Several American and Spanish Prisoners.

MANILA, Dec. 3.—Gen. Conon surrendered 800 officers and men with rifles, several American and 70 Spanish prisoners and the garrison at Bayombong, province of Nueva Vizcaya, to Lieut. Monroe, with 50 men of the 4th cavalry.

The capture of Bayombong was a successful bluff. Lieut. Monroe tapped the rebel wire, telegraphed to Conon that he was advancing with a large force, and demanded his surrender. After negotiations, Conon consented to capitulate to a "superior force," whereupon Lieut. Monroe telegraphed that he would enter the town with a small guard and receive the garrison's surrender. He captured the whole Filipino force and secured their arms, the rebels supposing that Monroe had an army behind him.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Considerable interest is felt here in the news that the insurgents at Bayombong have surrendered, particularly as the number is said to exceed that captured by the United States troops at any one time. Bayombong is the city to which Aguinaldo at one time contemplated retreating for the purpose of locating the rebel capital, after he was forced to flee from Tarlac, but the American troops pressed him so hard that he was unable to carry out his intention.

HOBART'S WILL.

The Bulk of His Estate is Left to His Widow and Non-Charitable Institutions and Friends Remembered.

PATERSON, N. J., Dec. 1.—The will of the late Vice President Garret A. Hobart was filed in the Passaic county surrogate's office Friday. The value of the estate is not given, but it is understood to be about $2,500,000. Of the estate Mrs. Jennie Hobart, the widow, receives $1,000,000 and one-half of the remainder after a number of bequests are made, and the son, Garret A. Hobart, Jr., inheriting the other half when he attains his majority.

St. Joseph's hospital, the general hospital, the Children's day nursery, St. Joseph's orphan asylum and Paterson orphan asylum, all of Paterson, receive $5,000 each.

Hobart Tuttle, private secretary to Gov. Voorhees and a brother-in-law of the vice president, receives $20,000. A. A. Wilcox, a close friend of Mr. Hobart, receives $10,000.

David Hobart, a brother of the late vice president, receives $20,000 and to each of his children is bequeathed $10,000.

Their Demands Refused.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 2.—About 800 union upholsterers weavers went on strike Friday, closing 26 mills and throwing out of employment nearly 3,000 hands engaged in various departments of the factories. The strikers demanded a working week of 55 hours and ten cents an hour for overtime and an increased wage scale. The advance asked is a general increase of about 25 per cent. Many of the manufacturers had made an advance of 15 per cent. and when the new demand was made they refused to consider it.

THE CONGRESS.

Contest Over the Admission of Representative-Elect Roberts.

A Protracted Debate On the Financial Bill Prepared by the Republicans—The Election of a Speaker in the House—Seat-Drawing.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—The opening week of the session in the house promises to be crowded with stirring events. There is always a great deal of glamour on account of the new congress which is a social as well as a political event. The galleries are always crowded and there is intense interest in the election of the speaker, the swearing in of members at the bar of the house, the reading of the president's message, the biennial seat-drawing, the introducing of bills and resolutions into the legislative hopper and the general clearing of desks for action later on.

But, as the committees are not appointed until just before the holiday recess, no actual business is transacted usually until after the recess. This year it will be different. At the very threshold of the session will come the contest over the admission of Representative-elect Roberts, of Utah, and later in the week the house will plunge into an important and possibly a protracted debate upon the financial bill, which was prepared by the republican leaders last spring at Atlantic City.

The Roberts case has attracted the attention of the whole country.

The republican leaders have adopted a plan of procedure which is designed to prevent Mr. Roberts from taking the oath of office until after the charges in connection with his alleged polygamous practices have been investigated by a special committee. Mr. Taylor, of Ohio, will make the objection to the administration of the oath to Mr. Roberts and will offer a resolution of his case to a special committee.

The announcement of Vice President Hobart's death will be made probably immediately after the Roberts case is disposed of, and the house will adjourn out of respect to his memory.

The drawing of seats and the reading of the president's message will occupy Tuesday. Tuesday night the republicans will caucus on the financial bill. It is the intention of the republican leaders to make this a caucus measure and proceed to pass it before the holiday recess. The caucus will decide, if the present intention is followed, not to wait for the appointment of the committees on banking and currency, but to bring the bill into the house forthwith, probably under a special order from the committee on rules. The debate may begin on Wednesday.

While the session promises to be upon the whole a busy one in the senate, the first week will be marked by considerable lethargy. Indeed, it would be exceptional if any actual work would be done. On Monday the new senators will be sworn in, but beyond this nothing will be done. Ordinarily the president's message is received on the first day of the session, but its receipt will be postponed for a day this session out of respect to the memory of the late Vice President Hobart, whose death Senator Sewall will announce.

Tuesday little will be done beyond the receipts of the annual message, the present purpose being to adjourn immediately after the reading of the message to give the republican senators an opportunity to hold a caucus over the reorganization of the committees. Wednesday and Thursday will be devoted largely to the introduction of bills. There probably will be no session either Friday or Saturday.

Among the first bills to be introduced will be the financial measure proposed by the republican members of the finance committee. It will be offered by Senator Aldrich, and will be referred to the whole finance committee, including the democratic members.

A NOVEL BOYCOTT.

An Effort Will Be Made to Induce Renters of Pianos to Shun Products of Factories Involved in Labor Trouble.

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—A novel boycott of the wares of the piano manufacturers who have locked out their employees was decided upon by the Chicago Federation of Labor Sunday. The plan is to induce the renters of pianos to shun the product of the factories involved in the labor trouble.

Wherever the taboed instruments are found on rent, the users are to be asked by a committee of the federation to return them to the warehouses where they were obtained and to replace them at once with instruments made in factories that have refused to join the lockout.

Prominent Inventor Dead.

NEW YORK, Dec. 4.—Charles Potter, Jr., the printing press inventor, died at his home in Plainfield, N. J., Saturday. He had been sick for some time with a complication of diseases. Mr. Potter was born in Madison county, N. Y., in 1824. Early in life he went to Westbury, R. I., and engaged in the printing press business. Later he became associated with several printing press companies. While in their employ Mr. Potter made several improvements on printing presses, and was famous for himself.

SECRETARY WILSON.

He Summarizes an Immense Amount of Valuable Work Done by the Agricultural Department.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—In his annual report Secretary Wilson, of the agricultural department, comments particularly on the successful extension of the weather bureau service around the Caribbean sea, giving timely storm warnings to the vessels of the navy and merchant marine.

The divisions of entomology have done valuable work this year in showing fruit growers on the Pacific coast the proper method of fertilizing Smyrna figs. It is believed that in a few years the Pacific coast will be able to produce as fine figs as are now imported from the Mediterranean.

The department has gathered much information regarding the plants which supply India rubber and gutta-percha, and expects during the coming year to locate in our island possessions, zones suitable for the culture of these plants. The United States now imports about $30,000,000 worth of rubber annually and it is thought that a large portion of this supply can be raised in our new island possessions. The same is true of Egyptian cotton, of which we import $5,000,000 worth annually, while he thinks that $200,000,000 worth of tropical products, which we now import each year, can all be raised in Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippines.

Much work has been done in the hybridizing of grains to secure varieties which will resist drought, rust and cold. The same methods are being used to produce hardy orange trees and sea island cotton which will be immune to the fungus disease now attacking that staple.

Irrigation work in the west has been carried on and much alkali land has been reclaimed. The secretary's recommendations in this line include irrigation experiments in the east and south outside of the arid region. He thinks that congressional action also may be necessary in the west on the subject of water rights and reservoir sites.

The experiment station work of the department has been extended to Alaska and should be extended to Hawaii, Porto Rico and the Philippines, so that they may be enabled to supply the United States with the tropical products of which our importations are now $200,000,000 annually.

The third year of experimentation with hog cholera shows that from 75 to 80 per cent. of the hogs injected with serum are saved.

The secretary strongly recommends a more rigid inspection of our export dairy products, to counteract the injury that has been done to this trade by unscrupulous dealers in the past.

Regarding seed distribution, the secretary says that there is no need for the department to come into competition with the sales of seedsmen, but that there is room for valuable work in the collection and distribution of such foreign seeds and plants as are adapted to this country but would not be secured by private enterprises.

Tea growing experiments in South Carolina are commended, and he notes that 3,600 pounds of good tea were raised in the gardens at Summerville in the past season.

The Turkestan alfalfa introduced by the department has been found a valuable forage plant in the northwest for resisting both cold and drought. Its introduction, it is said, probably will add millions of dollars to the annual hay product of the country.

A valuable quality of rice has been introduced from Japan. It is superior to the domestic product, and should succeed in Louisiana, hundreds of thousands of dollars will be added yearly to the rice-growing industry. The secretary asks for $10,000 to prosecute a technical and scientific investigation of native drug plants in cooperation with the Pan-American congress.

VICTIMS OF THE MAINE.

The Remains Will Not Be Removed From the Key West Cemetery—Those Buried in Havana Will Be Raised.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The citizens of Key West have petitioned the navy department not to remove the remains of the victims of the Maine, who were interred in the cemetery there. They have represented that the town purchased a fine lot in the cemetery, placed an iron fence around it and erected an expensive monument, which is to be dedicated this winter.

All this was done under an implicit understanding that the remains were not to be removed. Moreover, it is reported that only two of the bodies could be identified. The department, therefore, will not undertake to remove these bodies. Those buried at Havana, however, about 160 in number, will be brought home on the Texas.

Senator Thurston and Bride.

OMAHA, Neb., Dec. 1.—Senator John H. Thurston and bride arrived in Omaha Wednesday to spend Thanksgiving at the senator's residence. Many costly presents awaited them, among them being a set of three massive and ornate silver salvers from Mr. and Mrs. Howard Gould.

DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

FOR CONGRESS:
JUNE W. GAYLE,
of Owen County.

Hon. John R. Allen's Speech.

Hon. John R. Allen, of Lexington,
made a stirring speech yesterday afternoon at the court house in this city in interest of Hon. June Gayle, of Owen county, Democratic candidate for congress from this District. Mr. Allen was a leading contestant for the nomination in the convention which nominated Mr. Gayle.

Mr. Allen was introduced by Thos.
Moore, Jr., and spoke for about one hour. His speech was well received,
the applause being very enthusiastic.
He paid a graceful tribute to the man
who defeated him for the nomination
and pledged his heartiest support.

Mr. Allen was congratulated by a number of citizens after the speaking.

The Final Count Begun.

Messrs. Pryor, Ellis and Povnitz, commissioners of the State Board of Election Commissioners, met at Frankfort yesterday,
began the canvass of the vote of the entire election. Judge Pryor announced that the counties would be taken up in order and those in which there was any doubt would be laid aside for future consideration. When Breckinridge county was reached it developed that the certificates made out by the county commissioners used the wrong initials
for the name so Breckinridge and Coulter precedent was established on this point by both sides agreeing that they would be as intended. The crowd in the house was so dense that the Commissioners could hardly make their way through it. There is a large crowd in Frankfort, but no trouble is anticipated.

Gone To See The Count.

ABOUT fifty citizens from Knox county
passed through Paris Saturday morning
on route to Frankfort to see the official count made. Several of them remarked that they were "jest goin' over to see that their man got a 'far' and 'square'
count. One of the men asked "Col."
John Feeney if he could come into the ticket office at the depot to put some new "cattridges" in his pistol.

Yesterday morning three car loads of Clay county men passed through Paris,
bound for Frankfort on the same mission.
While they were at the depot a Paris
man remarked over his coffee in Alexander's restaurant to an L. & N.
man that he would bet those mountain fellows never had money to pay their expenses. Just at this moment a Clay county man came to the door and asked permission to step inside and put some new "cattridges" in his gun. The L.
& N. man asked the Parisian to please repeat his remark, but he answered "shut up, you blankety blank fool," as he saw the new loads being slipped into the mountain man's gun.

Objections to Matthew Howard's Will.

THE will of Matthew Howard was offered for probate yesterday in the County Court and exceptions were filed by some of the heirs. Judge Purnell has not yet named the date for hearing the exceptions. McMillan & Talbot are attorneys for the proponents and Mann & Ashbrook for the contestants. Mr. Howard's estate is assessed at $56,695 for taxes by the County Assessor.

The will is as follows:
I, Matthew Howard, of Paris, Ky., being of sound and disposing mind, do make and publish this instrument of writing as, and for, my last will and testament:

First, I direct the payment of any debts I may owe and my funeral expenses.

Second, I devise unto Elizabeth Sanford, wife of J. B. Sanford, of Headquarters, Ky., and daughter of my sister, Mary, my farm known as the Elijah Howard farm, lying in Bourbon County, Kentucky, adjoining the farm of John Stoker, Eli Howard's heirs, &c., and containing about one hundred and fifteen acres of land, but reserving the family grave-yard, and also a passway from the Cynthiana and Millersburg pike to the land described in the next section over the Elijah Howard farm, said passway to remain as now located, and to be for the benefit of the owner or owners of the land named in the next section.

Third, as to the farm of about one hundred acres, located in said County of Bourbon, on the waters of Hinkton, owned by John Stoker for life, and of which I own four-fifths in remainder and the children of Martha Thornton, deceased, the remaining fifth, I hereby devise to said Martha Thornton's children my said four-fifths part thereof, but if either dies without children or grand-children, the share of that one shall pass to the surviving child or children or their descendants, and if all of said Martha Thornton's children die without descendants, then said land shall revert to my estate and pass as here-in-after directed with the remainder of my property. This devise to the Thornton children is upon condition that they release all interest in the Elijah Howard land and all claims thereon for purchase money. T. T. Thornton, their father, shall take no interest in said lands so devised to his children by Martha Thornton, and in the event of the death of all of said children without descendants of their body, the said property shall revert to my estate as above directed.

Fourth, I devise to Richard W. Dimmitt, of Cynthiana, Ky., my farm in Bourbon County, Ky., containing about eighty-three acres, known as the Dimmitt farm, lying on Hinkton, adjoining the lands of Clay Current (or his son-in-law, Cunningham).

Fifth, I devise to Alice Hoeling, wife of J. C. Hoeling, in trust for the exclusive use and benefit of herself, but not to be required to give bond as trustee, the house and lot in Lexington, Ky., which I purchased from Hoeling and wife, and now occupied by them; also the Bowen farm, containing about one hundred and ninety-seven acres, lying in Bourbon County, Ky., on West side of Cynthiana and Millersburg pike, adjoining the Creek and Wyatt farm, &c. Said Alice Hoeling shall have no power to sell except by order of court requiring a re-investment of the proceeds in land to be held the same way. She shall have no power to mortgage said property. Said J. C. Hoeling shall have no right to, or interest in, said property, either during the life of Alice Hoeling or after her death, at which time it shall pass directly to her children, free from his claims by way of courtesy or other right.

Sixth, the remainder of my estate, real and personal, of every kind and description, I devise and bequeath to Ella Stoker. I nominate and appoint her Executor of this will and request the court not to require any bond of her as such.

Seventh, the reservation of the grave-yard in section two shall include the right of ingress and egress in passing to and from same over said farm described in section two.

Judge Purnell's Efforts.

Judge W. M. Purnell has been making commendable efforts in trying to better the moral condition of the persons brought before him for trial. He has been just but severe on the wife beaters, the adulterers, and those who have failed to provide for their children, and his work has shown good results.

He has also shown careful judgment in the business affairs of the county that have come under his direction, and has saved the county many dollars by economical methods.

DREAMS OF BOYHOOD.

I wish I were a boy again.
Back on the dear old place,
And full of dreams as I was then,
The lines showed in my face;
I wish that I could lie once more
Upon the new-mown hay
And have the thoughts I had before
I rashly came away.

I used to think of life in town
As something great and grand;
In dreams I wandered up and down
Through an enchanted land;
Things that I view as common now
Were full of wonder then,
And, oh, I wish that I somehow
Could be a boy again.

I used to dream of days when I
Might earn my daily bread,
Not with my calloused hands, but by
Some gentle means instead;
I looked upon the one who toiled
With honest pity then—
I wish my hands were hard and soiled
And dreams were sweet again.

And there was one I used to know,
When I was ten and she
Was twenty-four or five or so,
Who had a charm for me
Such as no other ever may;
However sweet or fair—
I wish I were a boy to-day
And she could still be there.

How sweet the time of boyhood seems
As I look back to-day;
How pleasant were the dear old dreams
That time has swept away;
Ah, yes, I'd be a careless lad
Back on the farm again—
But not if father kept the gad
With which he drove me then.

CHAPTER XII.—CONTINUED.

His heart seemed fairly to stand still as he grasped an oblong lump of dirt on the side of which his shovel had left a yellow scratch. As he lifted it its great weight told him the truth, and he sprang erect, shouting:

"It's a nugget! It's a nugget!"

"Let me see!"

Avery's voice trembled as he held out his hand.

"It's heavy as lead!" cried Tom, as he laid a lump of virgin gold, weighing nearly a pound, in the old miner's extended palm.

"It's gold, my lad," said Avery, after one glance. "I knew I was making no mistake. We must take no more chances. Let each man stake out a claim along this old river bed before anyone arrives. We are all rich men."

It seemed impossible to leave at that time, but the old miner's advice was good and they followed it, while Hank Bowers, who had not been aware of their discovery, soon understood that they were staking out claims formally, and proceeded to do likewise on his side of the ridge.

When this had been accomplished, Avery said:

"Now, we must each work on his own claim to hold it. A claim can't be idle for hours on Canadian soil without forfeiting it. Of course as long as we are alone here it doesn't matter, but at any moment some one may come. That chap over there might jump a claim if he didn't work it, and he would have the law behind him."

As Tom had made the first discovery, he was given the claim nearest the cave, and including the hole he had started. Avery took the next, while Taylor, Farbox and the second mate followed in the order named, and their combined holdings reached nearly to the woods. They found the gravel next the bedrock rich with the precious metal, and they worked! They were saturated with perspiration, and their clothes plastered with dirt, but what did they care? It was like a grand tussle in Nature to wrest from her her richest treasure. They felt injured when the sun went down and they were tired to desist. At the earliest daylight they were up and at it again and by day the golden store increased the little cave.

In this region the summer days are long, and darkness lasts but a few hours, but it seemed to Tom that the days fairly flew. They ate their food from their claims, Clara Avery bringing to each laborer, but spent much of her time near Tom, assisting him in his work when she had time to spare. Making a woman's delight in watching his confusion when she was near. He had long ago read his secret, while he had never uttered a word to her. His eyes told her far better than words that he would not let remain silent.

And she?

This is not a love story, but we may as well say that many little dainties found their way to the broad-shouldered young farmer which did not appear in the bill of fare for the others. The gold hunters had struck a bonanza in good truth, for they found the old river must have run over with a few feet of deposit. In some places the bed rock had been too high to hold the gold, and the laborer had to dig, but in others they found it beyond their wildest anticipations.

The surface of the rock was covered with little pockets filled with coarse, free gold, interspersed with nuggets, some of them as large as a man's fist. Tom was particularly fortunate in this regard, but they all kept their findings together and agreed to divide the sum total evenly.

In a manner two weeks passed. They were not troubled by Bowers, apparently satisfied to wash the other side of the ridge. He was doing well or not they meant of telling. He was a man of their mind, however, by an

They had gone to their work as usual one morning, when Clara Avery suddenly appeared on her father's claim and said:

"That man Bowers has just been up on the cliff. I never saw him there before, and I thought I'd tell you."

"What was he doing?" asked her father, straightening up.

"He seemed to be watching down on the plain," she replied. "After a minute or two he went back to his digging, and I heard him talking to himself."

"All right," said her father. "Keep your eye on him. I guess we sized him up about right. We'll attend to him."

The girl returned to the cave, but although she watched Bowers all day he appeared to be very intent upon his work, washing away as long as he could see that night.

Supper was the only meal they all ate together, and when it was finished the friends held a short consultation, and made certain arrangements in the cave. When they were completed the tired men threw themselves on their beds of boughs and were soon asleep, with the exception of Avery, who, however, was stretched on his rude couch in the cave apparently in the same condition.

CHAPTER XIII.
ROBBING THE CAVE.

Hank Bowers had been keenly aware of what was going on about him. He had worked steadily at his claim, and would have considered himself a lucky dog had he not seen the men opposite him carrying their findings to the cave each night in a heavy canvas bag, of which they had a large supply.

"They're diggin' fer me,"

This was his secret consolation and apparently it satisfied him. His plans bade fair to come out well if the sailor kept his word and returned. This was the only disturbing thought. It was the fear that his associate might fail him that induced him to delve with all his might in order that he might have gold of his own honestly if he could get it no other way.

On the morning of the twelfth day he saw the others were all at their work before he made his way to the top of the cliff. Although he knew the young girl would see him, he did not suppose she would attach any particular importance to the matter.

The sun was just showing above the horizon as he glanced sharply toward the distant boulder, where a man's figure stood out in plain sight. Even as he looked it disappeared.

"He's got more sand than I thought," muttered Bowers as he made his way back to his claim and worked away with feverish energy. "I must risk it to-night or never!"

He retired to his tent as usual that night, but not to sleep. He had other work to do. As soon as he was satisfied the rest were asleep he made his way cautiously to the cleft in the rock which led to the plain below. On one shoulder he carried the results of his two weeks' labor in the shape of a weighty bag of gold, while in his hand was a rope ladder which he had fashioned at his leisure.

To fasten the last to the top of the obstructing boulder was an easy task, aided by the light of a match, which could not be seen outside. Down the ladder he felt his way, and after some trouble reached the plain, where the starlight made the rest of the way comparatively easy.

As he approached the rock he saw a dark figure hastening to meet him and a moment later Obed Rider stood before him, saying:

"Is it you, Bowers?"

"Yes, Rider, it's me an' yer a brick! Right on time!"

"I got here yesterday. Sold the horses for $150 apiece and put the coin in a safe place there. Got three horses with me back here. What are you going to do?"

"Git the hosses an' foller me!" said Bowers, hurriedly. "I'll explain later on."

Rider obeyed, and as they made their way across the plain he asked again what his companion intended to do.

"All you've got ter do is ter wait where I put yer an' do as I tell yer, an' to-morrow you'll be a rich man," replied Bowers, mysteriously.

When they reached the base of the cliff he fastened the animals securely and led the way into the narrow passage, saying:

"Hold on to my coat. It isn't far."

When they came to the rope ladder he struck a match and whispered:

"Stay here till I come an' pass something down ter yer. Take it out an' fasten it on the hoss an' come back. If yer hear any shootin' come up an' gimme a hand!"

Without waiting for Rider to reply he ascended the ladder, leaving the latter in the dark passage and in no evitable frame of mind.

"Now for the gold," he muttered, as he crept silently toward the cave.

It was a perfect night, and the stars overhead gave sufficient light to enable Bowers to see objects quite a distance away. He was obliged to move very carefully over the broken ground to avoid a fall, but he seemed entirely at home at this sort of work, avoiding rolling stones as if by instinct.

In order to reach the cave he must pass close to the tents, and as he drew near them he redoubled his caution, for his only hope of success lay in stealth.

Nearer and nearer he crept until he could hear the heavy breathing of the occupants, and for fully five minutes he stood motionless, every sense on the alert.

Apparently the entire party was asleep, and with noiseless step he stole past the two tents and fixed his eyes on the opening to the cave. Twice since his arrival he had managed to peep inside unobserved, and only that morning he had seen the pile of fat canvas bags on the ground to the left. He had also noticed that the boughs and blankets upon which Avery and his daughter slept were on the opposite side.

Now he was within ten feet of the entrance, and after a last swift glance at the tents behind him he dropped to his knees and crawled deliberately up to it.

Again he paused.

Yes, they were both asleep. He could hear the long-drawn breathing at the tent, and plainly distinguish that of the father from his daughter.

Then, like some huge black spider, he crawled into the inky darkness, and was lost to view.

Inch by inch he advanced, guiding himself by the glimpses he had fixed in his mind of the place, until his hand rested on the treasure. The bags were heavy, and he moved them with difficulty in his recumbent position, but he had come prepared.

Thrusting his hand into his bosom, he produced a short, thick thing, with which he fastened two of the largest together, pausing often to be certain he had not disturbed the sleepers.

When this was done he hung them over his neck in such a manner that they swung clear from the floor. His next move was to stuff two small bags into his shirt. Then, with infinite patience, he worked his way back to the door and through it.

His breath came hard as he reached the open air, for the strain had been tremendous. Detection meant almost certain death, and even his iron nerve had not been proof against the situation.

When he had somewhat recovered, he crept slowly by the tents, until satisfied that all immediate danger was past. Then he rose to his feet, and hurried down the bed of the old brook until he reached the top of the boulder.

It was the work of a moment to fasten his plunder to a rope and lower it down, at the same time whispering loudly to his confederate:

"Are you there, Rider?"

"Yes," came the answer. "What is all this?"

"Gold, you fool!" hissed Bowers. "Lash it on one of the critters, quick!"

For a moment he hesitated. Should he join his partner and make good his escape?

Apparently cupidity won the day, for he began to retrace his steps toward the cave. His first success had made him more confident, and he was well aware that he had not secured half the bags he had just touched.

Again he reached the entrance without noise and crawled to the spot where the gold was piled against the wall. This time he could only stuff two or three small bags inside his buckskin shirt and grip one in his teeth.

He reached the open air safely and was just rising to his feet when Avery appeared in the mouth of the cave, revolver in hand, shouting:

"Thieves! Thieves! Take that, you robber!"

But before the words were fairly out of his mouth Bowers had dropped the

"But they'll be after us, won't they?" asked Rider, fearfully.

"They hain't got no hosses, hev they?" retorted Bowers. "Besides that, they dassent leave their claims fer fear some chap might jump 'em. It's a wonder nobody's struck that place afore."

The two thieves did not draw rein until daylight. When the sun was fairly up they paused on the top of a hill commanding a view for a long distance of the route they had traversed, but there was no sign of pursuit.

"I told yer so," said Bowers, triumphantly. "They can't chase us. Let's get some grub an' rest the hosses a bit. If we take 'em into Dyea in any kind of shape they'll sell for a tidy figger."

Their meal dispatched, they once more assured themselves that no one was in sight behind them, then mounted and headed for civilization, the bags of gold strapped securely on the spare animal's back and hidden from view by a blanket tied over them.

That night they went into camp just before dark, and Bowers proceeded to unload their ill-gotten gains. The first bag he removed, chanced to be the one he had himself filled in his two weeks of toil. As he lifted the second he noticed a very perceptible difference in the weight, although the two bags were of the same size.

"That's d—n strange!" he growled.

"They couldn't hev washed their gold very clean."

As he spoke he untied the second bag and thrust his hand within, then with a yell of rage and disappointment he dashed the bag to the ground and stamped upon it like an infuriated animal, when Rider stood aghast, fearing the man had suddenly gone mad.

With a bound Bowers sprang to the pack horse and seized another bag. One fierce slash of his knife rent it its entire length and then Rider comprehended.

Out of it dropped a mass of damp clay and gravel.

Hank Bowers was silent while he laid open the rest of the bags. When he was certain that his own was the only one containing a particle of gold he burst forth in a torrent of blasphemy so terrible that even Rider trembled lest some retribution might instantly follow and include him in its wrath.

"Sold! Took in like a tenderfoot!" raved his companion, kicking one of the bags in his fury. "What's that?"

As he spoke he picked up a folded paper which had dropped from the bag. Tearing it open he read the following lines:

"We were too smart for you. Remember that if we find you have given away our secret we will give an account of you to the Canadian police and have you driven out of the country. If you show yourself here we will fill you full of lead."

bag which he had brought out in his teeth like a retriever and sprang away in full flight.

Crack! Crack!

He heard the bullets sing over his head.

As he dashed by the tents a man darted out with suspicious promptitude and fired apparently pointblank at his back, but missed him.

A few seconds more and he had reached the rocky cleft and darted out of sight. Down the rope ladder he scrambled, then with great presence of mind he stopped long enough to jerk it free from the spur above so that it fell at his feet.

Rider had not yet returned from his errand and Bowers felt his way rapidly along the passage until he emerged upon the plain.

Running quickly to the horses, where Rider was at work, he cried:

"Jump up! Jump lively an' let's git out o' this! Vamoose!"

He set the example by throwing himself on one of the horses and seizing the bridle of the one upon which Rider had been carefully securing the stolen gold.

The latter needed no second invitation, and a moment later they were hurrying the beasts along the back trail as rapidly as the poor light and the nature of the ground would permit.

For fully two hours they made their way in silence except for an occasional oath from Bowers at the unevenness of the route, then, apparently reassured that they had made good their escape, he exclaimed:

"This is the biggest night's work one man ever done in this 'ere country, Rider. I took long chances an' I won out! It was a great plant!"

"How did you manage it?" asked Rider, eagerly. "Is it all gold in them bags?"

"It ain't nothin' else!"

With great pride he now narrated to his companion the whole villainous scheme, and then added, complacently:

"All they've got ter do is ter dig out some more gold. There's plenty of it whar they are. They hogged all the best claims, but I'm up ter them now!"

The Penniless Millionaire

By Capt. Musgrove Davis.

"NO, SIR, I can't do it. I'm very sorry, but it is against orders."
"But this is an exceptional case."
"Oh, yes, they are all 'exceptional',
these cases, but just the same I have been left in the lurch so often that I positively decline to repeat the experiment."
"But I will leave you my watch and rings, and I assure you that I tell
nothing but the truth."
"I'm not disputing your word, sir;
but I am forbidden to take such things,
and I say again, it can't be done. I have my instructions, and I shall be obliged to put you in the steeage. You say you have $16. Well, give me that." The money was handed over.

"Boy, show this man to the steeage
steward."
Such was the conversation I overheard between pursuer and passenger aboard an Atlantic greyhound on our first day out from New York. Naturally I glanced a second time at the hapless passenger as without another word
he turned and walked with dignity past me toward the steeage. It was evident he had no intention of appealing to the captain; nor would that recourse have been likely to avail him,
for every year matters of this kind are left more and more to the pursuer, his superior officer being sufficiently occupied with the navigation of the ship
and the government of the crew.

The pursuer and I were old friends and traveling companions; indeed, I was at that moment on my way to his familiar
little paneled and portrait-lined room for a bit of a visit. Therefore, I felt free to ask him what the row was.

"Oh, the same old game of no money;
came on board at the last moment in response to a cable; will pay when he gets ashore, and so forth. Not much!
Been sud too often."

"But, Kenshaw, that man's face inspires me with great confidence. He looks like a gentleman, and he bore himself like a thoroughbred. Didn't you notice it?"

"Yes, yes; but that's the dodge. I know 'em. Don't you waste good sympathy on that fellow. The more gentlemanly looking, the greater rascals,
generally."

"Well," I said, "tell me his name, anyway."

"Oh, certainly, King."
At length I arose and went on deck.
It was a glorious afternoon. The ship
was bowling along at the rate of 20
knots an hour, a fine breeze was blowing and the salt air acted like champagne upon my nerves and spirits.
Passing forward and over the bridge,
I reached the forecastle deck. I was really looking for King, but with no definite plan regarding him. Sure enough, there he was, seated on an anchor-stock and staring ahead into space. Stepping to his side, I said:

"Do you feel at home here, Mr.
King?"

The man turned, exclaiming with wide-open eyes: "Good heavens! Do you know me?"

"No," I answered; "but somehow I want to."

"Well," was the reply, "you seem to know my name, at all events. May I ask you to explain yourself? Are you in the steeage, too?"

"No," said I; "and if you won't think
me impertinent, I want to know why you are."

King looked at me for a few seconds
with a strange expression, and then answered: "I'll swear I'm not here for amusement. Have you an object in asking, or are you simply gratifying idle
curiosity?"

"Mr. King," said I, "I may be a fool, and you may be an adventurer, but I don't believe so. I came out of sincere interest. I heard your brief but pointed conversation with the pursuer, and I can't get you off my mind. That there is something peculiar in your position
is evident; that there is a good explanation, I believe. To show my good faith
I give you my card. Tell me what's wrong."

Immediately his glance fell to the deck. He remained thus for half a minute or more, and when he raised his great, brown, honest, many eyes to mine there was just a suspicion of moisture in them, although his only remark
was: "Well, I'll be hanged if I understand this sort of kindness." Then,
after a few moments' hesitation:

"Capt. Davis, I am in a false position.
I don't know what to do."

cabin; but, no matter what I have somewhere else, I haven't anything here. I won't even tell you who I am, for you would not know but that I was lying.
I don't blame the pursuer, for I presume
I should do just as he did if our positions were reversed. I have nothing to ask, for I can stand these seven days. I have roughed it pretty well in different parts of the world, and my present
accommodations, I must confess, are palatial compared with some I have had. The real hardship is to be suspected of sailing under false colors.
However, as I say, I can stand these few days. Why, during the war a major general would have been delighted with such quarters."

"Were you in the army, then?" I queried.

"Yes; were you?"

"I was."

"What regiment?"

"Fifteenth New York."

"Great Scott! Why, I was in the Twenty-third myself. Did you know
Col. Barney?"

"I should say I did!"

"Well, well; sit right down. I'll tell you all I know. We've something to go upon now. The Fifteenth? The deuce you say! How is old Col. Ransom?"

By the time I had satisfied his interest in the old colonel and others of the regiment, King seemed to feel that he could talk to me without reserve.

"I am," said he, "a partner in diamond mines at the Cape of Good Hope,
whither I drifted after the war. Yesterday afternoon at 3:30, in the Astor house restaurant, a messenger handed me a delayed cable message telling of a shipment of rough diamonds, which I must meet at Hutton Garden, London, without fail, on the 12th. The steamer was to sail at four; I was alone; the banks were closed, and my hotel was half an hour away. By the time I had made up my mind what to do and had telegraphed an order to have my traps
sent on by next steamer it was twenty minutes to four. I took a cab and reached the pier just five minutes before the plank was hauled in, and here I am. I have, or had, $19. I told the pursuer $16 because I must have something to buy of the stewards enough
linen to last me across."

"Now, my friend, I ask nothing. I have only told an old comrade the truth, strange as that truth may seem.
If nothing worse than this ever happens to me I shan't suffer; only, it is not very amusing."

It happened that I had a cabin to myself. I went to the pursuer and paid the extra sum which would enable me to share it with King. Kenshaw assured me that I was an idiot, but I didn't believe him. I was convinced through and through of the man's honesty. It was with considerable difficulty, though,
that I finally induced him to become my guest for the voyage.

I found my cabin-mate a most agreeable companion, and was truly sorry to part with him at Liverpool. There I bought his railway ticket to London
and bade him good-by. All he said to me was:

"I shan't be profuse in thanks now.
I do thank you, however, and you may possibly hear from me."

I did hear from him. Hardly had I arrived at my destination when a draft
came for the full amount of my advance, and with it a note containing an urgent invitation to dine at the Voyagers club in London on a certain evening, and asking particularly that I call at No. 9 Hutton Garden during the afternoon of the appointed day.

When, accordingly, the cab put me
down at the designated number, I found myself confronted by a heavy iron gate,
behind which stood a man, armed and in uniform. I named my friend of the diamond mines.

"You are right, sir," was the reassuring answer; "but will you kindly give me your card?"

A boy hurried away with it, and I heard door after door clank behind him
as in a prison. Presently he returned, accompanied by Mr. King, who, on seeing me, exclaimed: "I wanted to make sure it was you. Come in."

The iron door creaked on its hinges,
and we passed on through a succession
of similar barriers until we reached a snug but prisonlike office. Here I saw strewn on a table one or two quarts of rough, black-looking pebbles, and I was informed that I was looking on the very shipment of rough diamonds which had been the cause of King's sudden sailing.

Then from the safe were brought for my inspection diamonds, cut and uncut, in quantities that I should hardly have imagined to exist outside of King Solomon's mines.

We dined at the Voyagers royally.
King nearly killed me with kindness
before he would let me go, and one of the purest diamonds I have ever seen
now sparkles on my wife's finger as his parting acknowledgment of an unexpected service. — Saturday Evening Post, Philadelphia.

Brigands in the Caucasus.

The Russian government has at last adopted what promises to be an effective measure for the suppression of the lawless bands of robbers who have for years past held various districts of the Caucasus in a state of terror. Some years ago the military authorities at Tiflis came to the succor of the people
by distributing arms and ammunition
among them; in many instances machine guns were furnished to the chiefs
of mountain villages and isolated settlements in the plains. For a time the raiding banditti suffered severe losses,
but by organizing regular pitched battles against the villagers and settlers
they again got the upper hand. A body of 5,000 military and mounted police,
all picked men, has now been organized
for the special purpose of exterminating the pest, which is particularly prevalent in the two governments of Kutais and Kars. No quarter will be shown to the brigands offering resistance, and those taken prisoners will be tried by court-martial and shot or hanged.

THE EYES AT SCHOOL.

Defective Sight in Children Often
Due to Straining the Eyes
at Study.

Much attention has been given during the past few years to the eyesight of school children. Tests of vision have been made in schools all over the world,
and the results have been astonishing,
if not alarming. It has been proved that short-sightedness exists among pupils in schools and colleges to a much greater extent than was supposed, and what is more disquieting,
the number of pupils who have defective vision seems to be steadily growing larger.

Another fact brought out by such
tests is that the proportion of those suffering from imperfect eyesight increases with the advance in studies, being least in the lowest classes and greatest in the highest.

A German investigator discovered
this 30 years ago as the result of an examination of the eyes of 16,000 students in the schools at and near Breslau. In the primary schools he found about six in every 100 children suffering from poor eyesight; in the intermediate schools the number of nearsighted pupils had increased to more than ten per cent., in the high schools to 25 per cent., while in the university 60 students out of every 100 were myopic, or short-sighted.

A similar ascending scale of defective
vision has been noted among school children in other countries, although the proportions are not so high anywhere else as in Germany and Russia,
a fact explained by the excessive strain
put upon the eyes in reading German and Russian characters.

That the prevalence of defective eyesight among children is in great part due to the overstraining of a weak organ is not open to question. Unskilled laborers, and others who have not been obliged to strain their eyes
in early life, have usually good eyesight, but skilled workmen, typesetters, and so on, who use their eyes for close work and begin to learn their trade young, are often near-sighted.

Dr. Casey A. Wood, of Chicago, has recently drawn attention to the dangerous strain put upon the eyes of very young children by certain of the kindergarten tasks; but this subject is too important and too large to be compressed into a single article, and we must consider the means of protecting
the eyes in another article.—Youth's Companion.

MERE COINCIDENCE.

Four Men Who Found That on One Day Each Year They Lied
by Instinct.

"Speaking of strange coincidences,"
said the talkative man, "I ran across
one this afternoon that I do not think has ever been duplicated. I was taking lunch in a downtown cafe to-day,
and at the table next to me were seated four men. They were strangers to one another, but under the spell of what the waiter had set before them
were talking like old friends.

"By Jove!" said one of them, suddenly, "this is my birthday!"

"Why," exclaimed another, "so is it mine!"

"And mine, too," added the fourth
man.

"They stared at one another for a moment, and then the first man said:
"I am 53 to-day."

"Why, that is my age!" exclaimed another.

"Mine, too," said the third man.

"Gentlemen," exclaimed the fourth
man, "that is my age, too."

"A strange thing about my birthday," said the first speaker, "is that I once broke my arm upon that day, and since then my arm always pains me
upon that day."

"What birthday was it?" asked the second man, in a strange voice.

"My seventh," answered the first
man.

"Gentlemen," shouted the second man, "I broke my arm on my seventh birthday, and ever since upon that day
my arm has pained me!"

"I have had the same experience,"
returned the third man.

"And I also," said the fourth man.

"I fell from a hay mow," said the first man.

"So did I," came from the three in one voice.

"Gentlemen," said the first speaker,
"it lacks but one thing to complete this strange coincidence. Upon my birthday I always find myself unable to speak the truth."

"It is the same way with me,"
promptly returned the second man.

"Here, too," said the third.

"And the fourth man broke the spell
by asking what it would be."—N. Y.

Brushes.

An adept in dressing gives the following advice: Choose clothes that suit you from the best makers, in the best materials and style, then take care of them, your figure and your hair. To follow these dictates it is absolutely necessary to have the best of brushes.
First, for the hair, long, soft brushes
that permeate the tresses without either splitting or breaking them, while cleansing the scalp. A variety of clothes brushes are needed, soft for velvet, long
haired dusting brushes for millinery,
and good hard brushes for mud.—Detroit Free Press.

Cucumber and Onion Salad.

Cucumbers and onions, especially Bermuda onions, make a delicious
salad. Slice the cucumbers and onions
and lay them in separate bowls of ice
water for one hour. Never salt cucumbers if you wish them to be crisp.
Drain carefully, arrange in a salad
bowl, and at the last moment mix
with a French dressing, or with pepper, salt and vinegar. There should be one cucumber to one onion.

Higher Criticism.

The savage held his temper admirably.
"Nature," he replied, with a comprehensive gesture, "is our Bible!"
"Then, of course you have no higher criticism!" exclaimed the enlightened man, shuddering.

"Oh, but we have!" protested the savage,
vehemently. "Why, there are among us
many of advanced thinkers who wonder
for instance, if there isn't too much salaratus
in the bread fruit! Yes, sir!"

Here we see that the mind is alike impatient of fetters, no matter what man's cor-
poreal condition be.—Detroit Journal.

Non-Sinkable Boats.

The latest invention for saving life comes from London, and is a non-sinkable boat. If people would pay much attention to the preservation of life in other ways, there would be a great improvement. Hostetter's covered 50 years ago. It cures dyspepsia, indigestion and all forms of stomach trouble. It is an excellent tonic for the whole system

and may be had from any druggist.

Everything a Disease.

what makes me get so stout?"
"Oh, my dear madam, there is a flesh-
producing microbe, you know."—Indianapolis

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling
sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out
and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever;
nine cases of ten are caused by catarrh,
which is nothing but an inflamed condition
of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

A Wife Says:

"We have four children. With the first three I suffered almost unbearable pains from 12 to 14 hours, and had to be placed under the influence of chloroform. I used three bottles of Mother's Friend before our last child came, which is a strong, fat and healthy boy, doing my housework up to within two hours of birth, and suffered but a few hard pains. This liniment is the grandest remedy ever made."

Mother's Friend

will do for every woman what it did for the Minnesota mother who writes the above letter. Not to use it during pregnancy is a mistake to be paid for in pain and suffering. Mother's Friend equips the patient with a strong body and clear intellect, which in turn are imparted to the child. It relaxes the muscles and allows them to expand. It relieves morning sickness and nervousness. It puts all the organs concerned in perfect condition for the final hour, so that the actual labor is short and practically painless. Danger of rising or hard breasts is altogether avoided, and recovery is merely a matter of a few days.

August Flower.

"It is a surprising fact," says Prof. Hinton, "that in my travels in all parts of the world, for the last ten years, I have met more people having used Green's August Flower than any other remedy, for dyspepsia, deranged liver and stomach, and for constipation. I find for tourists and sailors, or for persons filling office positions where headaches and general bad feelings from irregular habits exist, that Green's August Flower is a grand remedy. It does not injure the system by frequent use, and is excellent for sour stomachs and indigestion." Sample bottles free at J. A. Wilson's. Sold by dealers in all civilized countries.

Crippled by Rheumatism.

Those who have Rheumatism find themselves growing steadily worse all the while. One reason of this is that the remedies prescribed by the doctors contain mercury and potash, which ultimately intensify the disease by causing the joints to swell and stiffen, producing a severe aching of the bones. S. S. S. has been curing Rheumatism for twenty years—even the worst cases which seemed almost incurable.

Capt. O. E. Hughes, the popular railroad conductor, of Columbia, S. C., had an experience with Rheumatism which convinced him that there is only one cure for that painful disease. He says: "I was a great sufferer from muscular Rheumatism for two years. I could get no permanent relief from any medicine prescribed by my physician. I took about a dozen bottles of your S. S. S., and now I am as well as I ever was in my life. I am sure that your medicine cured me, and I would recommend it to any one suffering from any blood disease."

Everybody knows that Rheumatism is a diseased state of the blood, and only a blood remedy is the only proper treatment, but a remedy containing potash and mercury only aggravates the trouble.

S.S.S. For The Blood

being Purely Vegetable, goes direct to the very cause of the disease and a permanent cure always results. It is the only blood remedy guaranteed to contain no potash, mercury or other dangerous minerals.

Free of Charge.

Any adult suffering from a cold settled on the breast, bro-chitis, throat or lung trouble of any nature, who will call at J. A. Wilson's, will be presented with a sample bottle of Boschee's German Syrup, free of charge. Only one bottle given to one person, and none to children without order from parents.

No throat or lung remedy ever had such a sale as Boschee's German Syrup in all parts of the civilized world. Twenty years ago millions of bottles were given away, and your druggist will tell you its success was marvelous. It is really the only Throat and Lung Remedy generally endorsed by physicians. One 75 cent bottle will cure or prove its value. Sold by dealers in all civilized countries.

It's up to the People.

Less than a year remains in which to gather facts, and information that will influence your vote for the next president of the United States.

That grievous wrongs have been committed, and grave errors allowed to exist without effort at correction, evidenced by the speech, writings, and comments of eminent statesmen and jurists; congressmen and leading men of business; professors and clergymen in every state.

Party affiliations have been ignored in the outcry against thrusting aside the safeguards of our fathers and rushing pell-mell into the affairs of Europe. The situation is a deplorable one, not alarming; as is also our domestic affairs dominated by gigantic Trusts.

The evils are not of spontaneous growth! They are the result of years of labor and expenditure of millions of dollars! Beginning with the displacement of American silver for English gold, the cunning of England's diplomacy in shaping the destiny of our Republic is apparent to any ordinary observer seeking the true inwardness of events.

The Cincinnati Enquirer has frequently called attention to each and every move as it was transpiring, and during the campaign of 1900 will present its readers with a truthful array of facts that will be extremely interesting and startling.

No fair-minded American, be he Republican, Democrat or of other political faith, can afford at this critical time to ignore the truth. Partisan prejudice, with the Trusts as dictators, is a far more degrading slavery than that which existed previous to the Civil War of '61-'64.

Trusts in the United States alone have a representative capital greater than all the gold and silver in the world. These will spend many more millions of dollars to suppress truth and facts and mislead all who fail to look beyond their plausible deceptions. Read the Enquirer and you will be able to discern the truth and combat falsehood.

A victory for Trusts and the McKinley Administration in 1900 will end the era of greatest
